Danielle Donehew pulled out a few basketball tricks when she visited the NCAA Hall of Champions this fall.

Being named executive director of the Women's Basketball Coaches Association offers Danielle Donehew a chance to go home again and make a national impact on the game she loves

The new executive director of the Women's Basketball Coaches Association has moved closer to home to make a national impact on the game she loves.

Danielle Donehew, who grew up in an Atlanta suburb, became the leader of the Atlanta area-based organization in August, just in time to take part in a dynamic period for the sport. The game's leaders, spurred by the release of the NCAA-commissioned Women's Basketball White Paper in June 2013, are engaging in conversations about how to grow the success of women's basketball.

"I need to understand the recommendations, feedback and impressions of our organization," said Donehew, who spent her first 100 days on the job on what she called a "listening tour," gathering input from members of the coaches association. "As I get the feedback, I can put an appropriate plan in place. We have to show our members that there is a value to being a member of the WBCA. We meet their expectations as to what we can provide."

Donehew spent a successful college career in women's basketball at Georgia Institute of Technology but also counts legendary Tennessee coach Pat Summitt among her early mentors. They first met when Donehew accompanied a high school teammate, LaShonda Stephens, on a recruiting trip to the University of Tennessee, Knoxville.

Now, Donehew is part of a new generation of women's basketball leaders.

"This is a special time in women's basketball where all of us want to unite," Donehew said. "We are finding ways to harness our talents and energies to move the game forward."

1996-2001 — Georgia Tech

Danielle Donehew was recruited to Georgia Tech women's basketball by then head coach Agnus Berenato, whom Donehew calls a mentor. She worked summer camps at Tennessee, where she got to know Pat Summitt.

Donehew made 241 three-point shots in college and ranks second on the Yellow Jackets' all-time list.

She became a Georgia Tech student-assistant coach while finishing her bachelor's degree in industrial and systems engineering. "Going to Georgia Tech was valuable to me because I was in an environment where academics were a priority," she said.

2001-08 — Tennessee

After graduating from Georgia Tech, Donehew called Summitt to see if she had a graduate assistant position available on her staff.

"A few weeks later she called back and said she had an opening and asked if I would like it," Donehew said. "I almost drove off the road. It all fell into place."

At Tennessee, Donehew was a graduate assistant for a year; director of basketball operations for five years; and assistant athletics director for women's basketball operations for one.

2008-09 — Atlanta Dream WNBA expansion franchise

After Tennessee, Donehew became a consultant to a private investment group in Atlanta whose goal was to bring a WNBA franchise to the city. She was later named executive vice president for the WNBA's Atlanta Dream expansion team.

"It was a great time period for me because I got to learn the pro basketball model," she said. "We started with a blank piece of paper and began developing what the Atlanta Dream would be."

2009-13 — Big East Conference

When Atlanta Dream owner Ron Terwilliger sold the franchise, Donehew moved to the Big East Conference to become associate commissioner for women's basketball. The job put her in position to work with legendary coaches such as Among Danielle Donehew's many mentors is Pat Summitt, who Donehew worked under from 2001-08.

UConn's Geno Auriemma, C. Vivian Stringer of Rutgers and Muffet McGraw of Notre Dame.

"The strategy at the conference office was important to learn," Donehew said. "You have to build relationships with television networks and have game management expectations throughout the league. It was also valuable for me to learn how important it is to have consistent branding across the league."

2013-14 — American Athletic Conference

When the Big East Conference non-Football Bowl Subdivision schools split from the conference, Donehew was part of the reconstitution of her league office, which eventually became the American Athletic Conference. She remained the associate commissioner for women's basketball. The league was successful: UConn won both the Division I men's and women's basketball championships, and the University of Central Florida won the Fiesta Bowl.

"What I learned at the American was the importance of immediate branding and getting the message out and clarifying the next steps," Donehew said. "It was a huge challenge to rebrand."

The Value of College Sports

Nearly 1,100 colleges and universities collectively invest in the experiences of student-athletes. Each year, more than 460,000 NCAA student-athletes gain skills to succeed on the field, in the classroom and for life.

Graduating from college is as important as winning on the playing field.

More than eight out of 10 student-athletes will earn bachelor's degrees.

Graduation rates for student-athletes as a group are higher than for their peers in the student body.

NCAA sports give young people opportunities to learn, compete and succeed.

NCAA schools award more than $2.7 billion in athletic scholarships every year to more than 150,000 student-athletes.

More men and women are competing in college sports than ever before.

The NCAA promotes the well-being of student-athletes.

The NCAA Student Assistance Fund has distributed more than $300 million during the past five years to help student-athletes with essential needs.

The NCAA's Sport Science Institute promotes safety, excellence and wellness in student-athletes, fostering life-long physical, mental and emotional development.

Learn more at NCAA.org/discover.

NCAA sports help student-athletes develop leadership, confidence, discipline and teamwork.

Student-athletes benefit from NCAA programs supporting leadership opportunities, internships, degree completion and postgraduate scholarships.

NCAA sports help prepare student-athletes for success after graduation.

— From the desk of — MARK EMMERT — NCAA PRESIDENT —

We gather today from different backgrounds and regions of the country to cheer for our favorite teams and celebrate our alma maters. But let's not forget why we're really cheering. College sports, our iconic and treasured American pastimes, are so much more than what you'll see in these championship events.

This year, more than 54,000 student-athletes will compete in an NCAA national championship and share with their teammates a unique sense of joy and accomplishment. But I've seen time and time again how the student-athletes who are succeeding at the highest level of sports competition are also achieving impressive academic success and giving back to their communities. One of them at the final site of this very championship will be honored as the sport's champion student because he or she holds the highest grade point average among the event's competitors. The Elite 89 award honors their achievement because it represents everything for which the NCAA stands.

Athletics plays an essential role in those accomplishments: student-athletes consistently tell me their love for their sport is what drives them to succeed. Ultimately, it's the success they experience not only on the field, but in the classroom and in life that makes these championships so meaningful. It's a chance for us all to stand and cheer on the next generation of leaders and innovators who will ultimately drive progress in our communities. It is why the commitment to higher education is a value we all share. And when we cheer for them at these events, we're really celebrating the hard work, determination and perseverance that helped them ace the test — in their sport and in their studies.

A lucky few will hoist a trophy in the air when events like this one are finished, and they will hear the cheers of their elated fans. Just remember that along the path to those 89 moments, more than 19,000 teams will share in a meaningful journey they will carry with them for the rest of their lives.

I'm glad you're here to celebrate one of those moments of student-athlete success. Enjoy the championship.

Athletics plays an ESSENTIAL ROLE in those accomplishments: student-athletes consistently tell me their LOVE FOR THEIR SPORT IS WHAT DRIVES THEM TO SUCCEED. Ultimately, it's the SUCCESS they experience not only on the field, but in the CLASSROOM and in LIFE that makes these championships so meaningful.
